

Alfonsia Perry denied parole

A man convicted of killing his girlfriend in Hubbard in the fall of 1993 will have to remain in prison for at least three more years, the Ohio Adult Parole Authority decided this month.

The parole board decided against releasing Alfonsia “Mickey” Perry, 65, was convicted of brutally beating Jeanette Purdue, 34, to death at a home on Rosser Avenue.

This was the third time since 2007 that Perry had sought parole. He met with three members of the parole board in May at the Richland Correctional Institution in Mansfield.

According to the prison website, Perry will next be eligible for parole in March 2026.

Perry was convicted in November 1994 of aggravated murder, felonious assault and inciting violence and sentenced in Trumbull County

Common Pleas Court to 20 years to life.

In a letter penned by Prosecutor Dennis Watkins shortly before the hearing, it was pointed out that Perry had previously been profiled as “a poster person for domestic violence.”

According to testimony at trial and eyewitness accounts from the victim’s two young children, Watkins wrote that Purdue was hit some 71 times with wooden bed slats and an ax handle. An 8-year-old boy stated: “Perry kept hitting her with the same stick and that’s when it broke and she fell on the bed.”

Her 6-year-old son said when he looked into the room: “Mickey hit my mom in the head with an ax and stick. Mickey pushed my mom outside and inside. He beat and killed her. She wasn't breathing or moving."
